AEgis Technologies Hosts Career Fair

Huntsville, Alabama (May 18, 2010) – Aegis Technologies was recently awarded a three year contract for the Air Force Modeling and Simulation Training Toolkit (AFMSTT) estimated by the Air Force to be worth $74 million. Aegis will be hosting a Career Fair at its Orlando office in order to find personnel to support this contract. Aegis is currently recruiting for the following positions: Exercise Support, Software Developer/Software Engineer, and Quality Assurance and Configuration Management.

The Career Fair will be held Tuesday, June 8, from 10 am-7 pm at Aegis Technologies, 12000 Research Parkway, Suite 450, Orlando, FL 32826. Candidates should expect on-the-spot interviews and must also apply online at www.aegistg.com. All positions will require U.S. Citizenship and the ability to obtain and retain a security clearance. The current openings are available in multiple locations including: Hanscom AFB, MA, Orlando, FL and Colorado Springs, CO.

AFMSTT is a non-commercial, government-owned simulation system used to train the Joint Force Command, Joint Force Air Component Commander, and their battle staff in multiple federation environments. AFMSTT supports military organizations by providing the air war simulation for senior commanders and battle staffs for training in the execution of joint and combined operations. AFMSTT consists of a group of software applications designed to provide a range of operational environments for mission training. The toolkit is built around the Air Force's Air Warfare Simulation (AWSIM) model.
